To Whom It May Concern:

I have worked with Sirius Construction on two remodel projects. The first (and larger) was a major remodel of our Downtown Branch. This particular project was a challenge in that we intended to occupy the building and continue our operations throughout the remodel. Greg, his on-site supervisor Frank, and their crews were very sensitive to these needs, keeping noise, dust and fumes to a minimum as much as possible. We were able to continue to serve our members with little disruption.

Additionally, because we had staff on-site through the entire process it was important that the on-site supervisor and his crews be able to communicate with and get along well with the credit union staff. To be honest, I think our staff will almost be sad to see Frank and his crew finish the job and move on!

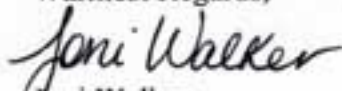

The building itself also presented challenges, as it is an older building that had been remodeled, added onto and reconfigured several times over the years. Demolition activities often uncovered new challenges and Greg and his crew were able to overcome them with minimal time lost.

The second remodel was a little more straightforward. This remodel was conducted over the summer months at our branch on the campus of the University of Montana. While we did not occupy the space during the remodel, we were under some strict time constraints, as we needed to have the entire job completed by the time the students returned to campus. Greg and his crew made sure we were open and ready for business in time to greet the new and returning students during orientation.

We have been pleased with this company's workmanship, its professionalism and its strong communication. Without these elements, a remodel or building project can quickly become a nightmare experience. These projects (although not without their glitches) were well-managed and any issues were immediately communicated (usually along with numerous possible solutions!).

Should you have questions about our projects with Sirius Construction, please don't hesitate to contact me.
